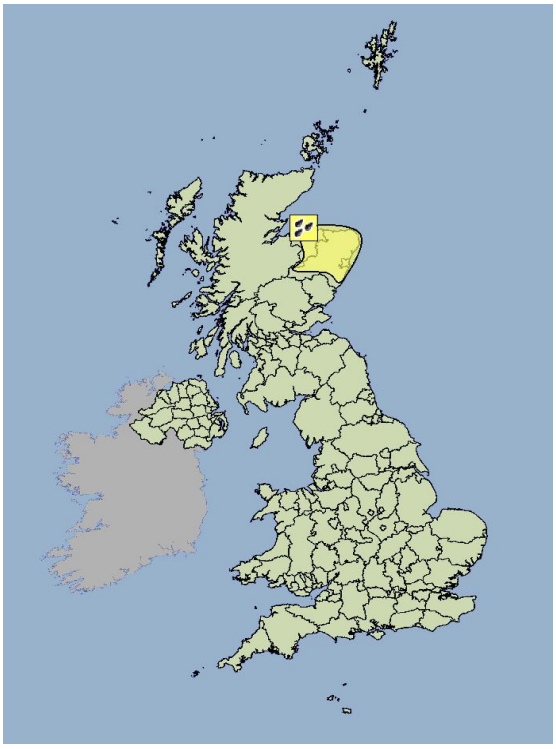
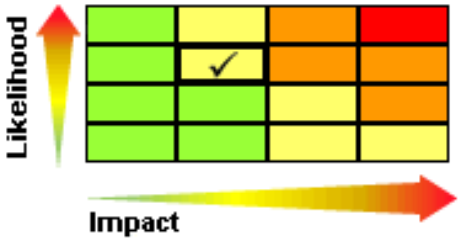
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
The area of rain that has affected the northeast of Scotland is expected to remain in situ today giving further totals of 20-40 mm. Added to already recorded values of up to 40 mm since yesterday, this is expected to swell rivers and streams.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 12:00 on Wed, 15th Jun 2016 until 23:59 on Wed, 15th Jun 2016

Persistent rain over northeast Scotland is expected to continue through today, and combined with rain which has already fallen, is expected to give some minor disruption. Please be aware of the potential for localised flooding of land and roads.
